

Interactive exercises

Practise third conditional with interactive exercises, it will return you a mark and highlight the incorrect answers.

Practise →

Theory video

Watch the theory video if you have no-idea of third conditional.

Enjoy it!

Watch →

What are the uses of third conditional?

- For real, likely and possible situations now, or generally in the future.
- For general truths, including game rules, and scientific facts.
- For unlikely or impossible situations now generally or in the future. Unlikely, but possible!
- A past situation and a result that didn't happen. In other words, when you regret something you've done in the past and now you can't change it.
- No-one is correct.

What is the structure of third conditional?

- If + past simple + would.
- If + past perfect + would + had + past participle (done, seen, gone...).
- If + past perfect + would + have + past participle (done, seen, gone...).

- A form of the verb to be (or to get) + a past participle of a transitive verb.
- No-one is correct.

Choose the sentence that means the same as the first sentence:

If I'd known about the play, I'd have taken part.

- I was told about the play, but I didn't take part.
- I didn't know about the play, so I didn't take part.
- No-one is correct.

Choose the sentence that means the same as the first sentence:

He wouldn't have worn a coat if it hadn't been so cold.

- He didn't wear a coat because it wasn't cold.
- It was cold so he wore a coat.
- No-one is correct.

Choose the correct word or phrase to complete the sentences with third conditional:

If our teacher _____ the third conditional to us, I'd have been very confused.

- Hadn't explained.
- Doesn't explain.
- No-one is correct.

Choose the correct word or phrase to complete the sentences with third conditional:

If they _____ learnt English, their holiday in the UK would have been very challenging!

- Had.

- Hadn't.
- No-one is correct.

Complete the sentence
with third conditional:

If I (not lose) my wallet, I
 (arrive) at the opera on time

Complete the sentence
with third conditional:

If Oriol and Biel (not be) so tired, they (go) to the concert
last night

Complete the sentence
with third conditional:

You (see) that wonderful film if you (come) to the cinema with us.

Check ✓